(1) FLASHBACKS OF OUR HISTORY

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL STORY

In 1847, the General Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church appointed William Roberts as Superintendent of the Oregon Mission. This expanded to California, and when William Taylor and Isaac Owen arrived as missionaries to California in 1849, Methodism began in California. The California Conference was organized in San Francisco in 1851. Few missionaries visited Southern California until, in 1853, Adam Bland was appointed missionary to Los Angeles. He arrived in a city with no Methodists and leased the El Dorado saloon near the town plaza. This was used as a chapel, parsonage and school for girls, taught by Mrs. Bland. It was some time before there were funds for a permanent structure, and, although other ministers arrived and there was some growth, there was disillusionment about the hope of establishing a mission in Los Angeles and work was abandoned.

After the Civil War in 1866, Adam Bland, who had gone to Santa Clara, returned and reestablished the church in Los Angeles, where in 1867, three people attended quarterly conference. This was the beginning of the continuous existence of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Southern California. At the fall Conference, the only appointments were ministers to Los Angeles, San Luis Obispo, San Bernardino, and Santa Barbara, but pastors spread through the area and by 1869, five churches were established. In 1875, the California Conference divided and established the Southern California Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at which time there were 13 church buildings, 1,257 members, 24 ministers in full relationship, and 3 men on trial.

One of the major continuing interests was missionary effort and growth. In 1883 a Home Missionary Society was organized under the leadership of Robert W. C. Farnsworth, which became strategic in the establishment of new churches. Lack of funds meant that it was difficult for the group to function, until in 1904 the Los Angeles City Missionary Society was organized, which was responsible for continuing church extension. The first black church, Wesley Chapel, the “Mother Church” was organized in 1888. One of its pastors, Alexander P. Shaw, was elected to the Episcopacy in 1936. Another continuing concern was education, and after a number of false starts, in 1876 the Los Angeles Academy was established. While the Conference supported the Academy, a committee led by Robert Maclay Widney and the Reverend A. M. Hough actively sought land for an institution of higher learning. This was established in 1879 as the University of Southern California. The Conference relationship with USC continued until 1952, when it became financially necessary to terminate the relationship. By 1885, the Conference felt the necessity of educating for ministry. Missionary and State Senator Charles Maclay gave land for the Maclay School of Theology to be built in the San Fernando Valley. His brother, Robert S. Maclay, who had been a founding missionary in China, Japan, and Korea, succeeded Mr. Farnsworth as Dean. After years of financial crisis, the School of Theology found it necessary to become the School of Religion at the University of Southern California. This relationship continued until 1956 when the School was moved to a new campus in Claremont.

Another early and continuing concern through the years was for temperance. Later, conferences dealt with issues of war and peace, civil liberties, and injustices in the economic order.

By 1900 there were 153 Conference Members and 18 Probationers. The Church had 14,755 members with 132 church buildings and 71 parsonages. By 1939, at the time of union with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South and the Methodist Protestant churches, the Methodist Episcopal Church had 106,522 active members and 15,031 inactive members and 280 churches in the Southern California Conference, which then became the Southern California-Arizona Conference.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

The Methodist Episcopal Church, while by far our single largest source of membership here in Southern California, is but one of many of our roots here. Mission churches were organized by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South in San Francisco in May 1850, in Sacramento in August 1850, and also in Stockton and Sonora in 1850, and in San Jose, in 1851. On April 15, 1852, what was then the California Mission, was organized as the Pacific Annual Conference.

The first Southern Methodist Church in Southern California was organized at Los Nietos in 1854. The first work in Los Angeles was organized in 1869 by Abram Adams, a transfer to the Pacific Conference from Alabama. On October 26, 1870, the Los Angeles Conference was organized, including Southern California and Arizona. By 1900 there were 30 Methodist Episcopal South churches and more than 2000 members in Southern California and Arizona.

In 1922, the churches in Southern California were reunited with the Pacific Conference. This Conference now had 104 pastoral charges, and 13,838 members. The denomination in California remained small, except for the very large Trinity Church in Los Angeles. At unification in 1939, there were 43 churches with 44 conference members, 2 deacons and 4 probationers that became part of the Southern California-Arizona Conference of The Methodist Church.

THE EVANGELICAL UNITED BRETHREN

As did so many others, ministers and laity associated with the United Brethren in Christ and Evangelical Association churches came to California during the Gold Rush days. In 1858, the Home Frontier and Missionary Societies of the United Brethren in Christ sent Israel Sloan, previously a missionary to Canada, to California. Guided by his organizing abilities and nearly limitless energy, by 1862 they were ready to organize into an annual conference with six pastors and 99 members of the various churches.

In 1864, two missionaries were appointed to California. Primarily because they restricted themselves to the German language, the Evangelical work progressed very slowly. By 1884, the California Conference, with five itinerant pastors, two local pastors and 257 members of local churches, was organized.

Evangelicals organized churches in the cities, where German speaking people were concentrated, but the United Brethren were in rural areas, which restricted their growth. By 1900, US had 839 members in 18 organized local churches with itinerant elders. Evangelicals had 546 members in 10 local churches with 8 itinerant elders and 3 local preachers.

Both denominations had concerns for temperance, the Sunday School, the Sabbath and missions. In 1946, the two denominations united, although conference union did not take place until 1951. By the time of Union with The Methodist Church in 1968, there were 42 organized local churches with 9140 members, 55 active itinerant elders, and 7 local preachers. 24 of these churches became a part the United Methodist annual conference. James Tom / research on the EUBs

HISPANIC WORK

Both Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Episcopal Church, South had missions in Arizona by 1880. Work in Mexico had begun in 1872 and there were many Mexican immigrants. In 1880, under the direction of the Reverend Antonio Diaz, work began in California, primarily in the areas of Los Angeles, Pasadena, and Santa Ana. In 1889, Frances DePauw Home was established for young Spanish girls. 1913 saw the establishment of the Spanish American Institute for helping Hispanic boys. In 1915, Plaza Community Center was established to serve the community. In 1921, the Los Angeles Mission was organized with its president, Bishop Adna W. Leonard, and Superintendent Dr. Vernon McCombs. At the time of organization, there were 45 churches. The mission then extended work to Arizona. In 1931, the plan of joining with the Southwest Spanish Mission was accepted and by now covered an area ranging from along the west coast to the Mississippi.

2025 SECTION L HISTORICAL INFORMATION

By 1939, there were discussions about ending the era of mission and thinking in terms of a conference. The Latin American Provisional Conference was organized in 1941 with a designation that three Hispanics would be district superintendents and Hispanics would hold the positions of Director of Christian Education and Executive Secretary of the Epworth League. Hispanics would hold memberships on committees and there would be wide participation of lay people.

The use of Spanish language to conduct conference business was denied. Hispanic pastors, formerly members of the Southern California-Arizona Conference, now became members of the new Conference and Hispanics could exercise self determination. There was a gain between 1945 and 1955 with 41 churches by 1955 and 3,238 members. Unfortunately, the poor economic situation made it impossible to continue. Instead of the concept of two uniting groups, the idea of integration was introduced and voted upon affirmatively. That year, the Latin American Provisional Conference met for the last time. There were now 29 established churches and 23 full time pastors.

There were efforts to assimilate Hispanics into Anglo churches, but this often became a denial of Hispanic culture. There was membership loss and anxiety about the future of the Hispanic Church. The ones who benefitted most were the ministers, whose salary and pensions increased, but there was also frustration here. Now the era of the caucus began and long hidden frustrations could be voiced. This was done through the organizing of the Latin American Methodist Action Group or LAMAG, which was to serve as a link between the local church and the Conference, promote educational opportunities among the ministers, and fellowship among Hispanics. The membership continued to decline between 1957 and 1978 as it has for the total church. In 1988 a special position of Superintendent of the Hispanic Mission was created to encourage growth in this portion of population.

HAWAII MISSION

The first Methodist missionary pastor to Hawaii was appointed in 1855 by the Bishop of the California Conference. His work became First Church, Honolulu. All Methodist Hawaii missionaries were named by the California Conference Bishop until the Methodist Episcopal General Conference of 1904 assigned oversight to Board of Home Missions. The Hawaii Mission held its first annual meeting at First Church, Honolulu, December 28, 1906, although many of its members were to come from the two California Methodist Episcopal Conferences. The work prospered, and in 1967, by vote of the Mission, the National Division of the Board of Missions, and the Southern California-Arizona Conference, Hawaii became a full district of what is now the California-Pacific Annual Conference. Material supplied by Frank Butterworth.

JAPANESE PROVISIONAL CONFERENCE

In 1877, Kanishchi Myana was baptized and became the first Japanese Christian in America. He was later the first ordained minister and served 8 years in Pine Church, San Francisco, the Mother Japanese Church. He then went to Hawaii to begin evangelistic work there. By 1896, there were 8 churches in the Pacific Coast and Hawaii, with 630 members. In 1905, the Hawaiian District became independent. By 1939, the Japanese mainland churches had grown, and, in that year, the mission became a Provisional Conference with new independence. Less than three years later, the work was destroyed by World War II and the Japanese people were SCattered as they suffered the bitter experience of evacuation and relocation. Dr. Frank Huron Smith, Dr. John B. Cobb and Tara Goto helped to rebuild the program of churches in the west.

In 1962, churches saw the emergence of English-speaking leadership and expressed the desire to integrate with annual conferences, which occurred in 1964 and the Provisional Conference disbanded.

CALIFORNIA GERMAN CONFERENCE

Work among German speaking people in Southern California began in 1875. When the California German Conference was organized in 1891 there were six congregations in Southern California with a membership of 250. World War I and its aftermath, with the German language in disfavor and German immigration restricted, placed tremendous pressure and limitations on them. However, in 1927 at the time of merger they were welcomed with open arms by the Southern California Conference. The Germans brought with them ten churches totaling about 750 members, plus the Pacific Old People's Home which was to develop into the impressive Pacific Homes. Material supplied by Thomas Roy Pendell.

PACIFIC SWEDISH CONFERENCE (METHODIST EPISCOPAL)

The largest number of immigrants of any Scandinavian country came to the United States from Sweden (1,228,113) in the period 1820 - 1950. Religious freedom was a compelling motive, as large numbers settled in North Central States where Methodism was strong.

The West Coast, particularly San Francisco, attracted immigrants directly from Sweden, particularly during and after 1849, as well as the earlier settlers from the Midwest and East, many of whom had become active Methodists.

On September 27, 1875, Bishop Peck organized a "Scandinavian" church of 70 members who bought property and built a church on Harrison Street. Most of this group was Swedish, though historical records usually say Scandinavian. This church became the mother church of Swedish Methodism in California.

In 1892 a Swedish District was authorized by action of the General Conference, to include the entire State of California. The General Conference of 1908 authorized the formation of the Swedish Mission Conference and it included, among others, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Kingsburg and Pasadena. The Pasadena Swedish church started as a Bible Study group in 1906 and built a church on Villa Street and Summit Avenue in 1909.

Because Bilingual ministers were in short supply, the General Conference in 1928 voted to authorize non-English Conferences to dissolve and merge with English Speaking conferences. That year the Pacific Swedish Mission Conference voted to merge with the Southern California Conference. Material supplied by Herbert Wennerberg.

CALIFORNIA ORIENTAL PROVISIONAL CONFERENCE

It was in 1887 members of First Church, Los Angeles, organized a Chinese mission, principally a Sunday School. A few years later they licensed the first Chinese local preacher in the United States, Chan Kin Lung, who later became the pastor of the Chinese Methodist Church. The Pacific Chinese Mission was organized in 1904, later becoming the California Chinese Provisional Conference. Merged with the California conferences in 1952, it brought into our Conference the Los Angeles Chinese and Korean congregations. Material supplied by Thomas Roy Pendell.

WESTERN NORWEGIAN DANISH METHODIST EPISCOPAL CONFERENCE

The Western Norwegian Danish Conference was founded in 1888 when many Scandinavians migrated to the United States and settled on the Pacific Coast. There were nine churches from San Pedro in the south to Bellingham, Washington in the north. The Annual Conference met in different location each year. Members of the host congregations would provide housing and meals. The summer family camps for the California churches were held at Mt. Herman, near Santa Cruz.

The Los Angeles Church was at Olympic Boulevard and Bixel Avenue and had a church building, parsonage, and a Girls Home, which provided a home away from home for the many single women who had found employment in the Los Angeles area.

In 1939, the church joined the Southern California Conference and changed its name to Bethany. A decade later when there was no further need for services in the Scandinavian language, the property was sold and members joined First Church, Trinity or Wilshire. Material supplied by Hazel Lafler, 1997.
